The International Safety and Health Construction Coordinators Organisation (ISHCCO) is proud to announce its support and endorsement of the Luxembourg Declaration on Public Procurement. By signing this important initiative, ISHCCO joins a growing alliance of European institutions and professional organisations that advocate for a quality-driven approach in the procurement of construction-related services.

The Luxembourg Declaration highlights the crucial role that architects, civil engineers, and other professionals play in delivering sustainable, high-quality, and socially responsible built environments. In this context, ISHCCO brings attention to the critical importance of integrating Occupational Safety and Health (OSH) considerations throughout the project lifecycle, especially during design and procurement stages.

ISHCCO Statement in the Declaration:

“Integrating OSH into procurement is essential for delivering safe, high-quality and sustainable built environments and societies. Early consideration of OSH ensures worker protection, cost-efficiency, and long-term social, environmental and economic benefits — fully aligned with the New European Bauhaus vision and the European sustainable development goals.”
